The Brighton Festival

Two films with IDS links will be shown this weekend in the Dome as part of the Brighton Festival. On Saturday 5 May at 14.00, Vanessa Redgrave's film Wake up World will be shown in the Concert Hall of the Dome. Vanessa Redgrave made this for UNICEF's 60th anniversary to tell the story of UNICEF over six decades, through archive material and interviews, including interviews of Ralph Fiennes and Liam Neeson and even a glimpse of Richard Jolly filmed in IDS. Tickets at the door for £6 each.

On Sunday 6 May at 15.00. The Killing Fields, a film by Carlo Nero will be shown in the Dome on Sunday, with reduced price tickets at £5 available at the door for IDS and Sussex University Students (take identification). The Killing Fields explores how taxation affects the eco-system, looking at the interaction between wildlife, land, taxation and law in Britain and Europe. The film is followed by an open panel discussion moderated by Richard Jolly.

Research Fellow – Impact Innovation & Learning (Ref: 502)

Full-time

£32,808 to £51,424 per annum, depending on experience

IDS is seeking to recruit a Fellow, with the aim of strengthening its capacity to develop and deliver cutting edge, mixed methods approaches to impact assessment that will improve development effectiveness. We seek to appoint someone with an established international reputation for high quality research, practice and publications in the area of impact evaluation and learning. We will consider candidates from any relevant disciplinary background and with any geographical focus. Depending on background, interests and orientation, the appointee will be placed in one of the institute's six research teams.

The post-holder will have a PhD or substantial practical experience and a scholarly publications record that demonstrates an equivalent academic standard. Applicants should have experience in fundraising and project design and management will be expected to provide leadership for an initiative to establish a centre of excellence in impact and learning within the institute. In depth knowledge of contemporary debates regarding impact and learning and the intellectual and historical roots of the main approaches to impact assessment within one or more areas of development are essential, as are quantitative and qualitative research methods, and a willingness to work across the quantitative – qualitative divide.
