IDS VACANCIES

Director of Teaching and Learning (Ref: 726)

Hours per week: 35 (1.0 FTE).

Contract type: Permanent.

Salary: IDS grade 10C £82,820 to £91,910 per annum, pro rata, depending on experience.

We are seeking a new Director of Teaching and Learning (DTL) to provide strategic leadership and help us further develop and expand our world-renowned suite of distinctive and innovative Teaching and Learning (T&L) programmes. These include MA degrees, Doctoral studies, Professional Short Courses, Learning Partnerships and E-learning initiatives. The DTL is responsible for overall development and fulfilment of the T&L strategy, working with IDS colleagues, partners, participants and other stakeholders. Postgraduate teaching and research are delivered with the support of the Teaching Office and Teaching Management Group, in liaison with University of Sussex teaching committees, quality controls and validation processes. An exciting range of Short Courses, Learning Partnerships and E-learning are currently hosted in a more decentralised manner by our research clusters, knowledge units and engagement hubs. We are currently bringing our diverse teaching and learning efforts closer together with the launch of a new Centre for Development Learning, which the DTL will direct.

The DTL is one of the Institute's most important senior roles. S/he reports to the Director, and is a member of the Institute's Strategic Leadership Group. S/he will take the lead in achieving the ambitions in the current T&L Strategy while working closely with the Director to align T&L with the Institute's broader strategic directions. The successful applicant will have a postgraduate level qualification and extensive knowledge of delivery of taught programmes in the UK higher education context. S/he will also have demonstrable knowledge and understanding of current developments in UK Higher Education, particularly funding and quality assurance as well as substantial experience of teaching, developing, innovating and leading postgraduate teaching programmes and supervision. S/he will understand issues relevant to international development, and bring exemplary strategic, business and people management skills, along with enthusiasm and an entrepreneurial approach.

This is a superb opportunity for an experienced, highly skilled educational specialist who is looking to step up to a broader, key leadership role in an organisation with a long track record of work and substantial commitment to social change, inclusion and sustainability, and exciting future plans.

Closing date: Wednesday 29 June at 10:00 UK time.

Interview date: TBC, aiming for mid-July.

Reporting to: The Director.

Research Officer (Ref: 725)

Hours per week: 35 (1.0 FTE).

Contract type: Permanent. Reporting to: Digital and Technology Cluster Leader.

Salary: IDS grade 6 band, £24,788 to £37,024 per annum, pro rata. Please note we are aiming to appoint around the middle of the grade band, between 6.3 (£27,546) and 6.5 (£30,081) depending on experience.

The Digital and Technology cluster are looking to recruit a Research Officer that will strengthen and expand our areas of research. The cluster has four broad thematic areas of focus in line with the broader IDS strategy. These are: digital economy, digital government and service delivery, digital citizenship and rights, and digital sustainability and resilience. Cutting across all of these thematic areas are key questions of power, politics and practices, and how these influence the contribution of digital technologies to development goals. (cont. over)

Current programmes include Making All Voices Count, a Grand Challenge on technology for transparency and accountability; work on real-time data in development. We are interested in how the digital revolution can be harnessed to address issues of inequality, inclusive societies and more sustainable development gains.

The individual will have a master's degree related to digital technology in an international development context. They will work on, support and develop cutting-edge research that will help to advance knowledge, shape policy and inspire practice around the possibilities and limitations offered by an increasingly digital world.

The work of the Digital and Technology cluster is firmly aligned with the core IDS strategic themes of curbing inequalities, accelerating sustainability, and building inclusive and secure societies. It is essential that the successful candidate have demonstrable understanding and experience of research and analysis of digital technologies in relation to one or more of these themes.

Closing date: Friday 24 June at 10:00 UK time

Interview date: TBC.
