OVERVIEW

Jeremy Lind is a human geographer of the Horn of Africa, focusing on conflict, violence and livelihoods in the region. He has over 15 years of academic research, advisory work and project management experience. At IDS he co-convenes the ten-member Resource Politics Cluster as well as convenes a research theme on 'Addressing and Mitigating Violence' for an £11 million DFID Accountable Grant. From 2010-2014 he convened a research theme on 'Pastoralism' for the DFID Future Agricultures Consortium. His research examines the influences and impacts of economic development and extractionist resource development on conflicts and livelihoods, particularly in pastoral areas. Jeremy leads several evaluation and policy advisory projects. Since 2012, he has led a 15 member UK-Ethiopia qualitative research team evaluating Ethiopia's Productive Safety Net Programme (PSNP). He also leads a 7-member UK-Ethiopia team that is providing policy advisory support to the PSNP Climate Smart Initiative, which seeks to develop connections with the Ethiopian government's Climate Resilience and Green Economy Strategy. In these various roles Jeremy has worked closely with government officials, including Ethiopia's Food Security Coordination Directorate and Kenya's National Drought Management Agency. He co-convened the IDS MA Poverty and Development Course until 2015. Before joining IDS, he was Lecturer of Human Geography at the University of Sussex, where he taught a range of undergraduate and graduate courses relating to environment, development and conflict.
