OVERVIEW

Stephen Devereux is a development economist with 30 years of experience in food security, poverty and rural development in 13 African countries, including 3 years heading a Rural Research Programme at the University of Namibia and one year researching household drought responses in northern Ghana. He has been a Fellow of the Institute of Development Studies since 1996, where he co-founded the Centre for Social Protection in 2005. He has published more than 70 journal articles and (co-)authored or (co-)edited 9 books, on food security, famine and social protection. He was a founding associate editor of the journal Food Security. He has worked for numerous international agencies and provided policy advice to many African governments. He has supervised more than 60 Masters students and 18 PhD students in UK and South Africa, and delivered sessions on over 70 training courses. Since 2016 he has held a Research Chair in Social Protection for Food Security, affiliated to the Centre of Excellence in Food Security at the University of the Western Cape in Cape Town, South Africa; and in 2019 he was awarded a Mercator Fellowship at the University of Bremen in Germany.
