OVERVIEW

Robin Luckham is a political sociologist with 50+ years professional experience. Since completing his PhD and book on the Nigerian Military he has focused much of his work around some of the more contentious dimensions of the state, governance, political violence and development. He has a long record of research and publication on the military and militarism, violent conflict, disarmament and development, peace and security, democracy and democratisation, the legal profession and the political economy of law. He has collaborated extensively with South-South and African networks of researchers, activists and practitioners in order to begin to transform security 'from below'.
