OVERVIEW

Dolf te Lintelo is a Research Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex. He leads the Cities Cluster. His research analyses the complex multi-scalar governance processes, actors, state/humanitarian/development policies and practices that govern poor and displaced populations' incorporation into city life, globally. He has an enduring interest in urban informality; food/nutrition insecurity, poverty, and wellbeing, and the ways in which marginal groups exercise (constrained) agency. Dolf enjoys adopting innovative mixed research methods and instruments, as he leads cross-disciplinary and cross-sectoral research collaborations. He has worked extensively in urban and peri-urban contexts, and conducted research in Bangladesh, India, Norway, Finland, Jordan, Lebanon, Nepal, Malawi, Nigeria, Tanzania, Turkey, the UK, Zanzibar and Zambia.
